VOLUNTEERS LEAVE THE HABITAT FOR THE BEACH

New international volunteer program at Australia's leading wildlife experience, Wildlife Habitat Port Douglas, has 'seas' the day and taken their volunteers from the park for a beach clean-up.

In the first of many community outings on 16th May the Wildlife Habitat took to Cooya Beach spending the morning combing the beach for trash and debris. Recovering several jam-packed rubbish bags of litter, the noted majority of the garbage were bottles, cans, fishing line and plastic bags.

Currently the Wildlife Habitat volunteer program welcomes people from around the world and offers opportunity to work closely with their keepers in all aspects of their roles to make a genuine contribution to the conservation and care of Australian wildlife.

The extremely popular program presently has limited enrolment numbers, however in the coming months the Wildlife Habitat will be expanding their international program to allow more volunteers in.

This initiative will permit the Wildlife Habitat to take volunteers on field trips outside the park for community betterment and beautification.

Wildlife Habitat Volunteer Coordinator Lili Usher-Chandler said that these field trips are aimed at giving back to the community and providing an inimitable experience to our international volunteers.

"I believe these field trips going forward will have a significant, positive impact on the local environment whilst encouraging people to visit the area and learn about its unique beauty." She said

"In a single, short day the volunteers had made a difference in our community with our Cooya Beach clean-up, and we were able to show them why this part of the world is like no other."

Wildlife Habitat is in Port Douglas and is Australia's leading wildlife experience, providing visitors with a chance to observe a huge range of flora and fauna up close.
